Who Won the Week?

Elaine Gannon – Her late entry to the Senate 3 race has a boost with the endorsement of the popular former Rep. Paul Fitzwater.

David Cole – This week brought another example of one of Cole’s biggest advantages in his primary: his opponents’ voting record. Rep. Mike Moon’s principled stands make for some unpopular votes like this week’s vote against exempting stimulus payments from taxation.

Elijah Haahr – After watching his Grain Belt proposal rejected by the Senate, the speaker put the tort reform bill on the calendar instead of taking revenge, showing he wasn’t going to let his personal agenda derail a caucus priority.

Republican legislators – They’ve got the supermajority and a full week to pass boatloads of legislation. COVID, SCHMOVID....
