

Who Won the Week?

Rudi Keller – Have you ever seen a reporter get under a governor’s skin like this? He just keeps breaking stories and giving Parson fits. It’s becoming almost a spectator sport now, waiting for Parson’s next outburst.

MO Republicans – No MO Republicans defended Parson’s attack on the Post reporter who withheld publishing to warn state officials of their web security problem. They all just stuck their hands in their pockets, and walked away whistling while the governor ranted. That decision looks even smarter as more information emerges about how disingenuous the governor’s blame game actually was.

David Barklage – One word: Probation.

Sara Walsh – Benefits from the exits of potentially tough candidates Kurt Schaefer and Caleb Rowden in CD-4, and then BOOM, posts a picture of herself with Donald Trump.

SAPA defenders – Greitens is one of the least popular people in Jefferson City. His attack on SAPA may help rally defenders of the law and harden resistance to modifying it.

Eric Schmitt – His office’s lawsuit blizzard shows no sign of slowing down. If Republican primary voters want a fighter, he’s showing them he can be one.
