Who Won the Week?

Missouri Democrats – It’s been years, but finally... the House 99 special election offers a glimmer of hope....

Nicole Galloway – The special elections gave her campaign the best news they could hope for. She’s the anti-Trump. And if the suburbs have soured on the president, it gives her a roadmap quite distinct from the Nixon/Koster/Kander path. It’s no longer win the cities big and keep the rural areas from being blowouts. Maybe now, it’s win the cities and suburbs big, and don’t even play for rural MO.

Scott Fitzpatrick – Labeled “most vulnerable” by the lobbying corps, Fitz hosted a very successful campaign kickoff with 425+ people and the entire statewide GOP slate in attendance to support him. He’s doing what he needs to do.

Ron Calzone – The capitol denizen hallwayers love to hate wins big at 8th Circuit Court of Appeals. Just glad I waited before ordering a batch of “Free Ron Calzone” t-shirts.
